Non-Contact Temperature Measurement and Control

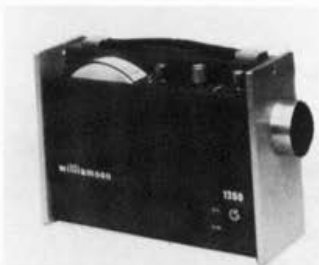

Rugged Portable Instruments & On-Line Systems
for Instantaneous Measurement of Product Surface Temperature

The versatile Williamson non-contact infrared temperature measurement instruments and systems offer many advantages in processing and manufacturing operations:

- Better on-line quality control for a better end product, lower reject rate, and lower costs
- Improved production efficiency
- Greater material conformity
- Optimized throughput
- More effective trouble-shooting methods

MODEL 600

Low Cost — Portable — Accurate
Ranges: 125–2,000° F
Response: 0.3 second
Sensitivity: 1° F

1200 SERIES

Portable, with seven basic ranges covering 125–2,100° F

Accuracy: 1%

Reproducibility: 0.5%

Aiming System: Sighting light

Models:

1206 and 1236: For small diameter targets (0.1 and 0.03 in.) and ranges of 125–1,850° F

1220: For transparent plastics, 125–1,150° F

1223: For cellophane and glassine, 125–300° F

ViewTemp 2000 Series

View and read target temperature without contact.

Simultaneous viewing of target and temperature

Simple push-button operation

Digital or analog display

Accuracy 1% Repeatability 0.5%

Drift-free linear output signal

Fast response

On-line monitoring capability (115V/230V)

Selective narrow band spectral filters

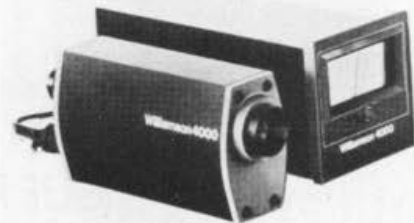

Fully portable / battery operated with recharger option

3300 Series

Direct Reading, High Temperature Measurement

1% accuracy
0.5% reproducibility
Rapid response
Telescopic sighting

The rugged models in the 3300 system can operate in almost any environment. A silicon detector is utilized to obtain precise measurement of surface temperature, preventing any effects from intervening gas flames or combustion gases. Both one and two point control are available. The system can be used during foundry, heat treating, and welding operations.

SYSTEM 4000

On-line process control systems with automatic calibration. Includes digital, analog, or recorder readout and set point control options.

Accuracy: 1%

Stability: Drift-free

Aiming System: Visual sighting

Models:

4200: For opaque materials, 100–2,000° F

4300: For opaque, transparent, and most polymer plastics, 100–1,500° F

4400: For glass and IR oven applications between 100–2,500° F

4800: For opaque film plastics, 125–700° F

So many changes have occurred around Providence Day this past year. The school has grown in size as well as in facilities. This yearbook has attempted to capture most of these changes, along with the personalities of the people making up the school. As editor of Liberty '79, I have enjoyed working with a new advisor as well as with an industrious staff. Together, we worked steadily to attain our goal of creating an interesting and meaningful yearbook.

I would especially like to thank Mrs. Daughtridge and Mr. Bagwell for their help in tough situations, as well as Mrs. McKaig for all the time and effort she gave the staff this year. I would also like to thank Mr. Binch for his assistance with photography, Mr. Taylor for his financial help, and Mr. Eveleth for his cooperation whenever we needed it.
